Berryville is 41 miles from Washington Dulles International Airport (IAD) in Sterling, Virginia, and 69 from Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport (DCA) in Arlington, Virginia, which between them serve every major and many minor airlines, and many rental car companies.

If you let us know how you'll be arriving, we'll be happy to let you know the most convenient options for getting there.

Berryville began in the 18th century as a crossroads settlement that was originally known as Battletown, named by Major Charles Smith to commemorate his participation in the Revolutionary War. His family home, The Nook, still stands at 106 East Main Street. Built in the mid-18th century, it is thought to be the oldest residence in Berryville.

When Major Smith died, the estate was divided among his four children, one of whom sold a portion of land to Benjamin Berry and his daughter, Sara Scribbling. Berry subdivided 20 acres into 66 building lots and petitioned the Virginia General Assembly for a town charter, which was granted on January 15, 1798. Today the town has grown to approximately 941 acres, and boasts a variety of commercial and residential buildings representative of its 200-year heritage. The current town population is about 3,000 persons, and is included in the county population of approximately 14,000.
